1. Admissions Application Guide for Prospective Applicants

1-1. Admissions Policy

The aim of the master's degree program (LL.M.) in Global Legal Practice is to cultivate legal professionals who will play active roles on the world stage, as well as legal staff for multinational corporations and international organizations. The program welcomes applicants with the resolve and ability to tackle the challenging task of acquiring an understanding of legal systems not only in Japan but across the world and communicating this understanding in English.

The selection process requires applicants to submit a statement of their purpose in applying for the program and career plans, together with documentation concerning their English language proficiency, character evaluation, academic grades in law and related disciplines, prior acquisition of legal professional qualifications, experience in legal practice, and other matters. Each applicant is subjected to a comprehensive evaluation from a fair and objective standpoint. In order to enable the acceptance of a wide variety of students, the program has entrance points in both spring (April) and fall (September), catering to the needs of applicants residing in Japan and those from outside Japan (international students). Two application periods are held each year in accordance with these two entrance points, with results announced separately for each period. Application Period I is usually held in May for entrance in September of the current year and April of the following year, and Application Period II is usually held in December for entrance in both April and September of the following year.

To date, the master's degree program in Global Legal Practice has accepted international students under the Japan International Cooperation Center's Project for Human Resource Development Scholarship and the Japan International Agency's Long-term Trainee Program. However, the selection schedule described above poses procedural barriers for prospective applicants under these projects, and such applicants are therefore offered a dedicated "Admissions Office"-style screening (based upon special recommendation) held from March to April each year.
