

Information

The emphasis of this class is on financial econometrics. Theory and applications will be extensively discussed, and students will be working actively by themselves possibly on both sides. The theory will involve two main related areas of financial econometrics, time series analysis and stochastic calculus. Finally, applications will be on the use of high frequency dataset in stock prices. In particular, we will be using R software extensively.