1. Admissions Application Guide for Prospective Applicants

1-1. Admissions Policy

[Desired Qualities in Potential Students]

The philosophy of this program is to train legal professionals with international awareness, interdisciplinary expertise, and innovative potential, who are capable of assuming leading roles in society. Accordingly, we seek applicants who possess the following interests and abilities.

- Individuals who aim to become legal professionals active on the global stage and who have internship or work experience at multinational corporations, international organizations, law firms, or similar institutions.
- Individuals who possess the willingness, ability, and required English proficiency to acquire knowledge of legal systems not only in Japan but worldwide and to communicate their insights in English as they take on difficult challenges.
- Individuals who, as government officials in courts, parliaments, or ministries of justice, or as legal professionals such as lawyers in developing countries, have engaged in addressing critical issues related to societal development.

[Student Screening Process]

In order to admit a wide range of applicants, the screening process will be conducted through (1) general entrance examinations and (2) specialized entrance examinations.

(1) General Admissions

In order to admit a wide range of applicants and to accommodate both candidates living in Japan and abroad (international students), the program conducts two rounds of general admissions per academic year, one for enrollment in the spring, and another for the fall. In a given year, the first round in May would allow students to begin enrollment that September or April of the following year. In the same way, the second round held in December would allow for enrollment in April or September of the following year. Announcements will be made for successful candidates of each admissions period. The admissions process requires applicants to submit a statement of purpose and career plans, as well as documentation concerning their English language proficiency, character evaluation, academic performance in law and related disciplines, prior acquisition of legal professional qualifications, experience in legal practice, and other matters. Each applicant is subjected to a comprehensive evaluation based on standardized quantitative and qualitative criteria, ensuring that a fair and objective assessment will be made with regards to their eligibility to enroll in the program.

(2) Specialized Admissions

In addition, this program accepts international students under global talent development programs and specialized training programs for highly skilled professionals implemented by the Japanese government and related agencies. In consideration of the timing of these training programs, a special recommendation-based admissions process is offered each year from March to April for eligible applicants. In addition to the documentation required for general admissions candidates (see (1) above), candidates applying through the specialized admissions process must undergo an interview.
